S. Sgt. Fred C. Francis Writes Special Article

The following article "Combat Finito!" was written by S/Sgt. Fred C. Francis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Francis of New Lenox, and published in a paper, while he was serving with the Army overseas.

COMBAT FINITO!

It's very difficult to realize that we'll not be awakened before daylight, shiver into our clammy long-johns and tramp to chow with an impersonal mess kit clanking in the still chill of the early dawn. No more powdered eggs—not so early at least; no more breezy jolting ride to the pit into which you stumble and hope for a milk run; no more "planned PFF" missions to LINZ or VIENNA only to have the clouds become uncooperative at the wrong time, no more sweating out the take off with "the usual 4200 rounds of ammunition, 2700 gallons of gas and 350 pounds of oxygen to say nothing of the bomb load; no more trips to Death Valley or to more distant targets where the gas supply is the main concern back on the Alps and Adriatic.

No more bomb runs with one and one half flak suits and two helmets (the other one is worn on the head), no more looking out for fighters, red flak, white flak and black flak, no more watching the oil pressure, cylinder head temperature and fuel pressure hoping that the one with 435 hours on it will last back to the fields; no more flub-dubbing (nuffed), no more frags to hang up in the bomb bays, no more oxygen leaks gas leaks, oil leaks or hydraulic fluid leaks, no more sweating out the landing gear, prop wash and cross wind.

It's a lot to live through, and some didn't you know. That's the price of our victory. These "no mores" will apply to some of us only temporarily for the rest, forever. For all its good feeling after a period of hoping, wondering, doubting, praying and now pausing to thank God for seeing us safely through our missions.

These are the thoughts of an enlist ed combat man, excombat in fact, who fully realizes his part was a small one. There were the other men in the ship, the crew chiefs and their assistants, armorers; supply men, (gas, oil, oxygen; ammunition etc.) cooks; truck drivers, operations, intelligence and a multitude of others that all worked together to make the American Army what it is today, the Worlds finest. No, I'm not waving the flag, I'm just stating facts that go to make up admitted truths.

Mom we've won the fight. See you soon Margie.

—S. Sgt. Fred C. Francis.

Gas Rationing Ends

It is like old times for a motorist to drive up to a filling station and say "fill it up" since gasoline was taken off rationing Wednesday.

The housewife is also happy that blue point foods such as canned fruit and vegetables, catsup, chili sauce and grapejuice are also off the ration list. Meat, fats and oils, butter, sugar, shoes, men's rubber footwear and tires will continue on the ration list for the time being.

Golden Rule or Bomb To Rule World

How great was the joy when the news was flashed over the radio and by special editions of newspapers. Tuesday evening, August 14, 1945, at 6 P. M., that the World War Two had come to an end, ending in a great and glorious victory for American arms as well as those of England, Russia, and China. How jubilant the people felt when they could finally give full vent to their pent-up emotions, yet how much sorrow also, thousands felt, whose loved ones will never return.

But on the other hand, all this rejoicing which of course is but for the moment, will not mean a thing, and all the millions whose lives were sacrificed during the years of war, will have died in vain, if humanity does not get a grip on itself and universally outlaw war and decree that there be no more armed forces any where in the world to start wars. The common people in the world have it in their power to stop all future wars, and suffering, by refusing to bear arms for any nation. It is this we done, the leaders and officials of nations would not carry on wars, because they would not risk their skins if they could not get the common people to risk theirs.

Another thing, a gigantic revival the world over, should be launched by the church, the press and radio, as well as schools and all institutes of learning, to educate the masses that wars never accomplish anything and that the follies of war only bring death, destruction and make fools of people. Let us hope that everlasting peace will finally be brought about, and it can be done by showing up the follies, the horrors and the utter uselessness of war.

Mankind must learn to live together in harmony, peace and faith in each other and in a world of law and order and tolerance. The world of the future must be ruled by the Golden Rule, no better rule has yet been found, or be destroyed by atomic bombs.

Church Bells, Fire Sirens, Auto Horns Greet Peace News

When the news of the end of the Jap war was received in Mokena, the fire siren blew for a while, and all the church bells were rung. Autos, with sirens wide open, toured the streets and all available newspapers and magazines obtainable, were torn into small pieces and used as confetti. Wednesday morning the Front street appeared like a scene after a winter blizzard, the street being covered with bits of paper.

Tuesday evening, special church services were held in the Immanuel Lutheran church by Rev. A. W. Gode.

Wednesday evening, special peace services were conducted in the Mokena Methodist church by Rev. Frank Anderson. In his sermon, Rev. Anderson stressed the point that the war just ended was never looked upon by the Christian churches as a righteous war and that even the late President Franklin Roosevelt had attempted to get some churches to go on record at their conventions, approving this war as a righteous one, they refused to do so. Rev. Mr. Anderson declared this stand was brought about by the severe criticism the churches and clergy received in the last world war by favoring the war. The church at that time was accused of presenting arms.

The same evening Front street at Mokena street was roped off for a short distance and dancing was enjoyed by a large crowd.

Special peace services will be held this Sunday in the St. John Evangelical church in Mokena Sunday night.

At Frankfort, soon as the peace news was heard at 6 p. m., the church bells rang, the fire siren blew and the fire truck, followed by many autos with siren and horns wide open, paraded thru the village streets.

At 8:00 o'clock, jubilation ceased for a short time to afford all to go to services in St. Peters Evangelical church, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Eric Bizer. Following this service, jubilation was again resumed this time by a dance on the street in front of the village hall, to the music furnished by a juke box. Dancing continued until 1 A. M.

In Orland Park the church bells were rung, the fire truck and cars toured the streets with the siren and horns wide open. The fire siren also blew. Special church services were held in the Christ Lutheran and St. Michael's Catholic churches, while the Methodist church had their peace services Wednesday night.

At Tinley Park, the same thing held sway as in other towns, with church bells ringing and fire siren blowing. Services were held in the Methodist Church by Rev. J. Frank Anderson and in the Zion Lutheran church by Rev. Albert Buddenhagen, on Wednesday evening.

At New Lenox, the peace news did not provoke much emotion. The church bells rang, the fire siren blew and the fire truck toured the streets. A group of smaller children paraded with drums, sleigh bells and noise makers. Special church services were held in the Grace Episcopal church.

REPORTED MISSING

While everyone was waiting expectantly for the peace terms to be accepted by the Japs, gloom was cast over the community of Homer township Monday, when Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Dale received a telegram from the War Department saying their son Elwood R. Dale, Fireman, first class was reported missing. He was serving on the ill-fated Indianapolis which was fatally torpedoed recently.

DAVE FERRISS, the Merlin of the mound, the ex-airman with the Boston Red Sox, is now after big game, meaning the star pitching records of the last 40 years. When you are levelling with dead aim on such past stars as Lefty Grove, Christy Mathewson, Carl Hubbell, Grover Alexander, Smoky Joe Wood, Ed Walsh, Spud Chandler and a few others, you have to adjust your sights to an unusual angle. For in these 40 years of big league baseball there have been others who have set up a number of incredible marks that the brilliant Ferriss must look at, face to face, or figure to figure.

Here are just a few among those who have won more than 20 games in any given season:

Robert Moses Grove, Athletics, 1931: Won 31, lost 4, pct. .886.

Smoky Joe Wood, Red Sox, 1912: Won 34, lost 5, pct. .872.

Lefty Gomez, Yankees, 1935: Won 26, lost 5, pct. .839.

Walter Johnson, Senators, 1913: Won 36, lost 7, pct. .837.

Spud Chandler, Yankees, 1943: Won 20, lost 4, pct. .833.

Carl Hubbell, Giants, 1936: Won 26, lost 6, pct. .813.

Dizzy Dean, Cardinals, 1935: Won 30, lost 7, pct. .811.

Eddie Cicotte, White Sox, 1919: Won 29, lost 7, pct. .806.

Christy Mathewson, Giants, 1909: Won 25, lost 6, pct. .806.

The above are the high-ranking percentage records since 1904. Ed Walsh won 40 and lost 15 in 1908 for .727. Alexander won 31 and lost 10 in 1915 for .756. Bob Feller's best year was 1939 when he won 24 and lost 9 for .727.

Quite a Target

It is Lefty Grove's record mark, set in 1931, that now becomes the main Ferriss target. Here's quite a target, no matter how keen a sharpshooter you may happen to be—WON 31, LOST 4 — PCT. .886. Only Smoky Joe Wood of the Red Sox in 1912 has even approached these miracle figures and Joe was 14 points away at .872, which is no part of a bust or a flop.

To beat Lefty Grove's 1931 mark, Ferriss will have to win 31 games and drop only 3. This means that Miracle Dave will have to win 14 out of his next 15 starts. You will have to admit this is quite an order.

This reminds us that Lefty Grove, the silent mountaineer, had the 6 greatest consecutive years any pitcher has ever known: .750 in 1928—.769 in 1929—.848 in 1930—.886 in 1931—.714 in 1932 and .750 in 1933. In 1930 and 1931, Lefty won 59 games and lost only 9. Try and match that combination for something over .870 for two straight seasons.

There are those perennial pessimists, who live in ancient history as they stroke their mossy beards, who have this to say:

"This is a soft year for pitchers. They are only facing a bunch of minor leaguers, most of them class B and class C. This is an off year. It shouldn't count."

But wait just a few seconds. Why aren't the rest of the pitchers moping up as Ferriss is? Newhouse of the Tigers is one of the best from many seasons, but though working for a much better ball club he hasn't been able to follow the Ferriss pace.

No Real Support

And looking back to Grove's big year, has Ferriss another Jimmy Foxx or another Al Simmons battling in runs for his side? Simmons hit .390 that season and Jimmy Foxx hammered 30 home runs over the wall. And there were others. Connie Mack had a world series team that year, back in 1931. Don't forget that Grove drew far better defensive and offensive support than the 1945 Red Sox can offer.

Without Ferriss, the Red Sox would be in seventh place, badly outclassed by every team in the American League except the Athletics. Leave out the Ferriss record and the Red Sox would have only 25 victories against the 42 they held after Sunday's list.

Don't forget again that Lefty Grove and Joe Wood were working with two pennant winning, two world series teams, while Ferriss has been pitching for a team that without him would be next to last among a lot of bad ball clubs. His infield and outfield support has been nothing to compare with the support Grove and Woods knew in other and better years.

Football's Coming Boom

"This will be the greatest war season football has known," remarked Steve Owen, coach of the New York Giants. "I am not referring alone to the pro game. I am also speaking for the colleges. We have been getting in a number of reports lately from our scouts. I've heard from a number of college coaches and they tell me their material will be much better than it was a year ago. They won't be beating Army or Navy but they will still be good."

The Green Bug Strikes

By WILLIAM J. MURDOCH
McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Features.

"WHY?" Charles Hobson inquired of his eight-year-old nephew. He shot a rather bewildered look at his wife who smiled knowingly and folded her arms across her ample front. "Why, Butch?" Charles repeated. "Why can't you tell your new teacher—Miss Melrose, is it?—that you're to come straight home instead of helping her fix a recreation room in her basement?"

"Well, gosh, Unk—" Randolph "Butch" Speers said evasively, staring at the floor.

Now, thought Helen Hobson. If that green bug of jealousy didn't take a big bite from Charles' peace of mind, then 37 years of marriage to him hadn't taught her a thing. "Tell him, Randolph," she pressed primly. "Tell him what you told me."

"I just can't!" the boy exclaimed. "I—I like her! She's so pretty and nice—" he paused, embarrassed.

Helen was extremely pleased at the signs of distress on Charles' long, lean face. So she gave that bug plenty of jaw room. If the boy wanted housework, she intended to see that Charles ordered him to help at home. "Imagine, Charles, a teacher using her looks to inveigle a roomful of children to help clean her cellar!"

"Ummm," Charles muttered. He had enjoyed almost all of his nephew's affection and admiration ever since the boy came to live with them pending the reunion of his parents, one a soldier and the other a willing hospital patient.

"Well, gosh, Unk," Butch attempted to explain again, "she's just teaching us how to paint chairs and wash woodwork and stuff. And she sings to us while we work, and tells us stories and—"

"It isn't right," Charles interrupted. His wounded pride assumed a cloak of indignation. "After this, you come straight home, Butch. Hear me?"

"O. K.," the boy said in a small voice, awed by the unusual severity of his uncle's command.

"Aunt Helen can find plenty of work around here," Charles said righteously, "if that's what you want."

That was just what Helen wanted. "We'll start right now, Randolph," she said. "Get the water on for supper. And tomorrow after school we'll clean our basement."

They didn't, though. In vain Mrs. Hobson peered out the living room window for two hours after the clock atop the bookcase struck three. No nephew. Finally he arrived barely a few minutes before his uncle.

"He did it again, Charles!" Mrs. Hobson greeted her husband.

"I'm sorry, Unk," Butch began tremulously. "Miss Melrose said she was sure you wouldn't mind if I helped just once more—" his voice trailed off into miserable silence when he saw the mounting storm in his uncle's face.

"By George!" Charles growled, throwing his hat on the hall table. "If you ask me," Helen said tartly, "the boy should be—"

"It isn't the boy's fault," Charles snapped. "It's that teacher! You can't expect children to resist women like her. By George!" he said again, snatching up his hat. Both his wife and nephew were startled by the wild light in his eyes. "By George, I'll tell her a thing or two! Butch, where does she live?"

"On — on Market street, near Elm," Butch stammered.

"It's the old Brennancer place," Helen said. "Charles — where are you going?"

"To call on Miss Melrose."

"Charles, don't do anything you'll regret!"

Bang! The door slammed violently. Butch gulped. "G—gosh!"

"I should say so," Mrs. Hobson said, blinking. The green bug had taken a bigger bite than she expected. "I should most certainly say so!"

The supper hour passed. The clock struck seven. Helen looked out the window for the 20th time. Still no Charles. She did hope he wouldn't make a complete fool of himself.

Seven-fifteen. Helen remembered the time 20 years before when Charles had chased the milkman with the fire tongs for stepping in the pansy bed. Her husband's mild gray eyes had held just such a wild light on that occasion too. Seventy-three. Seven-forty-five. Then she saw him coming up the walk. Mrs. Hobson's heart swelled with relief and alarm. He was home—but from what? She threw open the door.

"Charles! Goodness, I hope you didn't — well, what did happen, anyway?"

Charles kept his eyes averted as he stepped inside. "I'm sorry, Helen. I didn't think—"

"Sorry? Didn't think? Charles, tell me this instant!"

"Yes, yes! But Miss Melrose—"

"Well, we talked a little bit," Charles explained hesitantly, "and, Helen, she's so small that the first thing I knew I was helping her paint the basement walls, and tomorrow I'm going to leave the office early and help her and the kids move some heavy furniture downstairs. Butch, I'll meet you in front of the school at—why, Helen! Here, take this chair! You're positively green!"

Revised G.I. Bill

Unless the senate accepts the revised G.I. Bill of Rights as it was liberalized by the house recently, there is little chance of further enactment until the reconvening of congress after the summer vacation.

The major provisions of the new bill which skimmed through the house by unanimous voice vote are designed to liberalize the loan and education sections and make only minor changes in hospitalization, employment, unemployment compensation and administrative titles of the original bill.

Amendments to the education sections extend from two to four years after discharge the time in which a study course may be started; extend from seven to nine years after the war's end the time in which education or training may be given at government expense; provide for short intensive post-graduate or vocational courses of 30 weeks or less; permit the government to finance correspondence courses; increase from $50 to $60 monthly educational subsistence allowance for a veteran without dependents, and from $75 to $85 the allowance for a veteran with dependents.

Amendments to the loan feature extend from two to six years after discharge or end of war the time in which a veteran may apply for a G.I. guaranteed loan; permit a qualified veteran to negotiate with any established lending agency or individual approved by the Veterans administration, for a loan for purchase of a home, business or farm in any amount; retain the existing limitation of 50 per cent of the principal, or $2,000, whichever is less, on the amount the government will guarantee; prohibit negotiation of loans until 30 days after a veteran's discharge, provide that the application need be approved only by the lender, instead of by the Veterans administration and provide that the reasonable value of property involved in a loan shall be determined by the lender's appraisal.

Q.—If a wife is separated from her husband, a lieutenant in the air corps, and he names his mother beneficiary in his life insurance, is the wife entitled to any benefits if the husband is killed?

A.—Since the mother is named beneficiary, she would be the recipient of all the insurance.

Q.—Are women in the service eligible for benefits under the G.I. Bill of Rights?

A.—Yes, nurses in both the army and navy, WAVES, SPARS, WACs and women in the Marine Reserves.

Q.—If a serviceman is not physically qualified for combat duty will he be sent overseas?

A.—The army will determine his physical qualifications, and if not physically qualified for combat he may be sent overseas for limited or other than combat duty.

Q.—Is the lapel pin for honorable discharge given only to men who have served since December 7, 1941?

A.—All men who served honorably in the armed forces since September 8, 1939, are entitled to wear the honorable discharge lapel pin.

Q.—How can I get a duplicate of my army discharge, lost in a fire at my home?

A.—You cannot get a duplicate, but you may obtain a verified certificate in lieu of discharge by writing to the Adjutant General, War Department, Washington 25, D. C., and asking for an AGO Form 0214.

Q.—What is the difference between an enlisted man's allowance and his allotment?

A.—An "allotment" generally is a sum of money reserved wholly from the pay of a serviceman and sent to his dependents or placed to his credit in a bank. The benefits obtainable under the Serviceman's Dependents' Act are termed "family allowances" and are made up from a sum from the soldier's pay plus a contribution from the government.

Q.—Was the increase in pay of enlisted men in the army for the duration only?

A.—No, the pay act is permanent legislation.

Q.—My husband served a year and then was discharged under a Section 1 disability. What is his draft classification and can he be re-inducted?

A.—The Selective Service policy now is where men are honorably discharged, they are placed in Class 1-C and identified on the records by the designation, "disc." They may not be removed from this classification unless the director of Selective Service determines circumstances warrant a reclassification. In such case he may be reinducted, but not as long as he remains in Class 1-C.

Twosome for Juniors

THIS smart twosome for juniors makes an ideal back-to-school outfit. The figure-molding jumper combines handsomely with blouses or sweaters—for street wear add the jaunty flared jacket.

Pattern No. 1387 is designed for sizes 11, 12, 13, 14, 16 and 18. Size 12, jumper, requires 2½ yards of 35-inch or 2½ yards of 39-inch fabric; jacket, short sleeves, 1½ yards.

Rotating Statue

One of America's outstanding memorials of the First World War is The God of Peace, the 38-foot onyx statue of an Indian by Carl Milles, installed in 1936 in the Ramsey county court house in St. Paul, Minn., says Collier's.

To show the detail of its back, this 60-ton figure rotates automatically on its base, to the right and to the left, 66 degrees in each direction, completing the two movements in five hours.

Slenderizing Frock

A CHARMING daytime frock for the woman who likes uncluttered simplicity. The gored skirt is slenderizing and very flattering to the larger figure. Shoulder tucks give a soft, feminine air.

Pattern No. 1374 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 4 yards of 35 or 39-inch material.

Firestone

GROUND GRIPS.

Best on EVERY job...
Under ALL Conditions

40% LONGER TREAD LIFE

14% STRONGER CORD BODY

UP TO 16% MORE DRAWBAR PULL

GOOD tractor tires do two things. They get every ounce of pulling power from your tractor. They stay on the job. That's why Firestone Ground Grips are best on every job... under all conditions.

There are sound reasons for this. Cord bodies are 14% stronger... able to withstand hard knocks. Tread life is 40% longer... capable of giving years of extra service.

Firestone Ground Grips increase pull at the drawbar by as much as 16%. That's because traction bars are connected, adding up to 215 inches of traction bar length per tractor. Also, there are no broken-bar, trash-catching pockets.

The strong, sturdy bars are always clean... ready to take the next deep, forceful traction step.

That's why it is just sound economy, when buying tractor tires, to demand Ground Grips, made by Firestone, the pioneer and pacemaker.

For the best in music, listen to the "Voice of Firestone" every Monday evening over NBC network.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Never use waxed thread in stitching wools. In pressing, heat of the iron melts wax and leaves a greasy line. This gathers dust and may attract moths.

Try a dash of cinnamon on cold watermelon.

Before starting to polish leather-seated chairs, wipe off the seats with a cloth dipped in sweet milk. You will be surprised at the dirt that will come off. Polish as usual.

Peanut butter mixed with a little cream makes a good filling for white or graham cracker sandwiches.

Add a few chopped ripe or green olives to either plain or lemon sauce served with fish.

Linoleum can be cleaned easily if it is kept waxed. A dry dust mop is generally all that is needed. Scrub only when dirty.

If you are resingling your house, think about color. A thoughtfully chosen roof color may greatly enhance the appearance of a house.

Thursday Mrs. W. Schoeneck entertained the Smiling Thru bunco club.

Mr. John Boeyer returned last Saturday after spending a few days with his son Harold and wife in their home in Minneapolis. He stopped at the Dells at Wisconsin on his return trip and while there one of the Indians recognized him as being the person who entertained his group when they were at the Century of Progress in Chicago in 1934. They insisted that Mr. Boeyer meet their chief and visit with them. While this group was at the Century of Progress they were guests of the International Harvester Co. and Mr. Boeyer was their host. He brought them out to his lake at Tinley Park at that time which pleased them very much.

With the Fifth Army, Italy. Pfc. Wilbert Mager, rifleman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Mager of Tinley Park is a member of the 361st Infantry Regiment's 3rd Battalion which recently was awarded the Distinguished Unit Citation for gallantry, determination and esprit de corps in overcoming unusually difficult and hazardous conditions.

With the 45th Infantry Division in the Assembly Area Command France—The 45th Infantry Division is coming home from Europe but no Japanese can take comfort in the fact. The "Thunderbird" is merely going to sharpen its combat hardened beak and claws for the final assault on Fascism's last strong hold.

The division of which Pfc. Joseph Greco of Tinley Park is a member, already has established a brilliant record as a spearhead unit in the drive to free Europe from Nazi rule. Now, at Camp St. Louis in the Mourmelon Sub-Area of the Assembly Area Command, it is undergoing processing for redeployment, and its members will receive 30 day furloughs in the United States before transfer to the Pacific.

San Diego, Cal., July 24, 1945 Mokena Women's Service Club, Dear Ladies:

While I have the time this afternoon I am devoting myself to the answering of letters. Usually we are kept quite busy, but at the present time there is no work to be done.

At the present time I am located at a repair base at the outer edge of the city of San Diego. We arrived here July 5th and will be at this location for an undeterminable length of time, as there are many repairs to be made on the ship which has been in continuous operation for the past two years.

The first thing that I want to say is "Many Thanks" for the very pretty Easter card that I received some time ago. To receive these cards at Easter and the gifts at Christmas time assured me that I hadn't been forgotten by the people back home. It gives one a feeling of security to know that the folks back home are thinking of him.

When I left the states last February 13th, I didn't think that I would be back home so soon. I guess I am one of those fortunate persons being that I was assigned to an old ship which was to go back to the U.

S. R. for repairs soon. When we left the states, we headed for Pearl Harbor where a group of WAVES WACS, and SPARS debarked from the ship. We were only at Pearl Harbor for 24 hours, so it was not possible to get any liberty. The following afternoon we left Pearl and after being at sea for 12 days, we finally arrived at Manus Island in the Admiralties where a large receiving center is located. There I stayed for a month before I finally was assigned to this ship. While I was there I learned that Chas. Burkhardt had been located on an island near there just a few months earlier but had recently moved up to the front. I also had the opportunity to visit with Melvin Penner of Batavia who at that time was located at the receiving center.

The biggest surprise was yet to come. On April 4 I was finally assigned to this LST and on the morning of the same day I came aboard the ship being the ship was in drydock for repairs of damage suffered at Leyte, there was plenty of work to be done. It happened one day at quitting time I was putting equipment away, when some one walked up to me and asked if I knew him. I was so surprised at first that I just stood there speechless, looking at him. After we exchanged greetings we sat right down there and had a nice long talk. The few days I was there Johnny and I spent as much time together as possible, talking of course, and Mokena was always the topic of conversation.

The day after we left the drydock it was reported that the dock had been bombed. Only recently I heard that Johnny Martie had been injured in the bombing. I hope that it was nothing serious.

Before leaving the Admiralties we took on a load of supplies. From there our next stop was to be Emirau island, an island of the Bismark Archipelago. Here we unloaded our supplies and reloaded with thousand lb. bombs. Emirau was a good island for liberty, one reason being that it was small and another reason was that we were allowed to go anywhere on the island that we pleased. Some of the fellows even had the opportunity to go on bombing missions but that was curbed by our commanding officer as he didn't want to have any of his men needlessly endangered. After final loading operations had been completed at Emirau we shoved off this time bound for Guam in the Marianas.

It was at Guam that we received orders that we were to come back to the States for repairs. And here we are safe and sound. Our crew was very fortunate as we only lost two men all the time the ship was out in the South Pacific.

Life aboard an LST is very comfortable with the exception of the times when she beaches on an island to unload supplies. Then is when everyone is spared, and the thought in everyone's mind is to hurry and get the supplies unloaded and get the ship off the beach and away from danger, especially when the supplies are such things as Octane gas and Blockbuster bombs. I guess that's enough about that.

The food aboard our ship is very good as are the sleeping accommodations. No one aboard the ship can complain about that. While we are at sea most of our time is spent standing watches and there is little time to do anything else, such as sleeping or writing letters. It is when we are in port that we have lots of free time. Usually when we get into port there is a lot of mail waiting for us, being that we are out for long periods of time. The most mail I ever received was at Guam when I was the recipient of 32 pieces of mail including 2 copies of the News Bulletin.

Being that we move around so much the Bulletin does not reach me regularly but when it does reach me it is eagerly read from the front page to the back. I hope that it can still be sent to me in the future as I appreciate receiving it very much.

I guess I had better draw this letter to a close as it is just about time for me to go on liberty.

Hoping to see you all soon,

I remain,

George Rinke

The following letter was received by Mrs. Frank Sizer by "Bud" Nordsell, a Mokena soldier:

Korbach Germany.

June 28, 1945

Dear Mrs. Sizer:

I received your letter several days ago but I just got around to writing now. I really don't have an excuse for not answering promptly since we're certainly not doing anything. Its just that I'm so disgusted with this waiting around over here that I don't feel like doing anything. Last week they told us we were breaking up in three days. The current rumor is to the effect that the 78th Division is heading for home in July. That may not mean anything to us though. Right now we are in the Seventh Army and we could be assigned any where at a moment's notice. The 78th Division is going to the Pacific but when or whether we go with them is the big question. As I said before, our Battalion score is pretty high even though mine is only 64 (that is if we get two more combat stars everyone is waiting for). Maybe I should have stuck up my foot when the shrapnel was falling around me like rain one time. Five more points.

Yes, I got a letter from my mother saying she had received a telegram from Jack saying he was in the States. He was pretty lucky over less than a year. We'll soon be starting our eighteenth month.

Yes, it will be a happy day when all the boys are home to stay. But personally I'm afraid I got a big dose of the wander bug. When I was young I always hoped to travel and the war very considerably arranged for some of it. Even so there are many places over here I would like to see. I had a pass back to Ipa, Belgium last weekend on the way back we went through Cologne. Lord, what a mess. I counted three houses that people were living in all the way through town. The great Cathedral isn't destroyed but it is damaged. I have a piece of one of the stained glass windows a caretaker sold me for ten cigarettes. Cigarettes are almost worth their weight in gold over here.

This has been one of the most unseasonable Junes I can remember. It has been quite cold and it has rained off and on nearly the whole month.

I'm going to include a list of the towns we've had C. P.'s in since we left the states. It is quite bulky so I'll have to bring this letter to a close for now. Best of health and happiness to you all.

Yours,

Melvin Nordsell

MORE TELEPHONES IN RURAL HOMES

Plans of the Illinois Bell Telephone Company to extend and improve farm telephone service will provide a great many more families in rural areas with telephones within three years after men and materials are again available. This wide-range program will cost over $3,000,000.

It continues and expands a rural program which the company had carried on for a number of years, until the war cut down its pace. Records show that in the territory served by Illinois Bell, rural telephones have increased 115% during the past ten years—a growth more than double that in cities.

When some 2,900 Illinois Bell telephone men and women now on leave with the armed forces come back from the war, one of their big jobs will be to help provide more and better telephone service for farm families.

Off the Runway

Civil Air Patrol, Squadron 613-3
by 2nd Lt. Elyne Conel

Dr. Alexander of Harvey is a member of a flying organization called the "Quiet Birds". I think you'll get a "lift" when you learn just who the "Quiet Birds" are and why they were christened with that name. Members are flyers of World War 1. After the Armistice these good fellows would get together in hotels to talk over their flying adventures. They'd get so noisy in their enthusiasm that folks would shout at them, "Quiet, you Birds!" and so very fittingly they call themselves the Q. B.s or Quiet Birds.

It's high time for anyone who wants to get up in the world and keep pace with events, to take to the airways! And, recently I discovered that Ford-Lansing Airport is one of the convenient taking off points. Managed by Robt. Slamp, a Private Pilot, with over 1,000 flying hours to his credit, the over all set up looks well managed and well kept.

The field boasts a Flight Office and Hangar very modern, and a landing area 2,650 feet square. Night flying facilities are not available as yet. However, a large beacon sends out its weather eye, rotating from the top of the Flight Office.

Flight Service is available for those of you who want to get places fast, while you relax as if you were on a cloud, and enjoy a bird's eye view of the scenery.

Training facilities are available for student pilots, (dodos). One hundred and fifty students, 50 percent of them women, are now on their way UP at Ford-Lansing, travelling along the skytrails towards their Eagle Wings (Private Pilots Licenses) They receive their training from three instructors, Floyd Fund, Harry Scatena and Carl Bock; in eight planes, five Cubs and three slick low winged PT 19s.

There's lots of fun as well as constructive extra curricular activity on the field. Surplus used Army planes are on the line, ready for inspection and buyers. Members of the Women Flyers of America have a neat, cozy club house, located just in front of the hanger, and overlooking the field. A Civil Air Patrol Squadron, under the leadership of its Commander Lt. Borda, uses the airport as its flight base.

My thanks go to Manager Robert Slamp for courteously introducing me to Ford Lansing Airport.

Local Airport News of the Week Ending August 11th:

That exciting first solo hop was made by Thos. Reade, Harry Kaufman, Wladyslaw Bartman and C. S. Bland. Congratulations, from now on the sky's the limit.

That difficult Commercial Pilot's Written exam was successfully passed by Jack Morton!

The following XC (cross country) flights were made. Mr. S. Have to Fort Dodge in a Waco. Mr. C. Ferguson to Muskegon, Mich. in a Taylorcraft. J. D. Taylor to LaPorte, Ind. on the 4th and return on the 8th. in a Cub Cruiser. Dr. Elmo Brennon to Streator, Ill. in a Piner Cub. C. J. Franks to Indianapolis in a Grumman. Robt. McHugh to Lockport and Lansing in a Cub J4E. C. L. Brattin to Lansing, Mich. in a Cub J4. H. B. Mayer and J. Spector to Kankakee and Joliet in a Cub Harry Dintelman and a commercial pilot to Ottumwa, Iowa.

It's very comfortable "upstairs", and the view is beautiful! "C'mon up!"

That's all for now.

The Legion picnic held last Sunday was a grand success. The Auxiliary members had charge of the refreshments stand and netted a good sum of money to help swell the treasury of the unit. The proceeds of the wool blanket and quilt sales netted a good sum which will be turned over for Christmas gifts for the boys in service. Mrs. Eva Burgert was awarded the wool blanket and Jerry Schussler the quilt.

Postwar Streamlined Cargo-Handling Plane

A streamlined cargo-handling system has been devised for speeding vitally needed supplies to the Pacific war front via the 72½-ton Mars Transports. It is the first ever planned for a fleet of large flying ships operating on extended overwater routes. The system has proven so successful that its use during postwar era is assured. These and similar planes will be fitted to carry on large operations on future global routes.

Jap 'Ersatz' Merchant Fleet Takes a Beating

The harbor at Hachinohe, in the Jap home island of Honshu, is no safe harbor for these "ersatz" wooden luggers of the dwindling Jap merchant fleet. Hastily and crudely built to replace better ships sunk by the Americans, these ugly ducklings of the sea soon join their better predecessors at the bottom of the sea—urged on their way by guns and bombs of carrier-based aircraft of the mighty U. S. Third fleet.

Light Comes on Again

Blackened out since Pearl Harbor, the 300,000-candlepower beacon at Montauk Point, Long Island, is shining again with its prewar brilliance. One of America's first lighthouses, it was established in 1799 and is one of thousand aids to navigation.

World's Tallest Hit

The tower of the Empire State building, world's tallest, is shown enveloped in fog, smoke and flame after a U. S. army B-25 bombing plane crashed into the building recently.

Tires to Aid Civilian Needs

Here is one of the huge shipments of rubber tires which arrived from Europe, where they were used on U. S. army vehicles throughout the war area. They were unloaded at Fort Totten, N. Y., where they were inspected and classified by the army. Some will be kept in army service, but many turned over for disposal to civilian purchasers.

All-Americans Practice at Yale

BRITISH LABOR PERSONALITIES
Britain's Labor party which swept Churchill out of office is a strange mixture, resembles the liberal branch of the Democratic party more than any Socialist movement. It has its liberal and its conservative wings, has had no labor troubles similar to ours during the past decade.

Clement Attlee, Britain's new prime minister, is a poor man. . . . He was little known among the fashionable people of England until 1935 when his salary was raised to 2,000 pounds a year. . . . After getting this pay boost, Mrs. Attlee was able to venture into society for the first time, was able to start playing golf, hire enough help to keep her home going. . . . Attlee likes to putter in his garden, do odd jobs around the house, constantly puffs a pipe, is a sharp contrast to fiery, charming Ramsey MacDonald, England's last Labor prime minister. . . . Attlee is no forthright leader, is considered more of an impartial middle man, will have all he can do to keep peace within his own widely split party.

Attlee's greatest rivals for power inside the party are paunchy, jovial Herbert Morrison and hard-headed, deep-voiced, testy Ernest Bevin. . . . Morrison lost his right eye when he was three days old, has had a "leftish" outlook ever since. . . . Morrison has played runner-up to Attlee in many elections, carries on constant behind-the-scenes warfare with Bevin. . . . Bevin had the same war job which Sidney Hillman took over in the OPM after Pearl Harbor—handling labor relations. However, Bevin made a better go of it, fought grimly and successfully for better rations for workers. . . . Morrison is a cockney, has a spry sense of humor, likes to dance, is head of the Labor party in politically potent London. He is also a man of daring, had the ancient tradition-encrusted Waterloo bridge torn down because he found it unserviceable, afterward had traffic rolling more smoothly through the center of London. . . . Morrison is a hard ruler.

Bevin—Union Boss

Ernie Bevin is a hard-headed union boss. . . . He hates dictatorships but is a dictator in his own union, the giant transport workers. . . . Bevin runs his own union like John L. Lewis runs the mine workers. . . . Outside his union, however, Bevin's labor practices are more like those of Sidney Hillman and Phillip Murray. . . . He believes in negotiation rather than strikes. Bevin took a bad trouncing from Winston Churchill in 1926, has never forgiven the ex-prime minister. It was Bevin who called the 1926 general strike in England, a strike which Churchill dealt a shattering blow. . . . Bevin is a forthright anti-Fascist, was against Hitler, Mussolini and the Cliveden set from their inception, was responsible for the tough-minded position his party took internationally from 1933 to the outbreak of war. . . . As leader of the transport workers, Bevin controls considerable of the Labor party, is rough on his enemies, gruff with his friends, loses his patience frequently.

To get feminine support, the new labor government will lean heavily on a red-headed fiery labor M.P., Ellen Wilkinson. . . . Miss Wilkinson is at home in a fight, knows the world, has contempt for Britain's colonial policies, is a scrapper from the word go. . . . She knows about riots and bloodshed first hand, was in the thick of the black and tan trouble in Ireland, even led hunger marchers on London during the depression. . . . Miss Wilkinson lives in the Bohemian Bloomsbury section of London surrounded by poets, painters, actors and writers; has persuaded many of them to pitch into labor's fight. . . . Blunt and forthright, Miss Wilkinson was the first member of parliament to defend King Edward's marrying American-born Wallis Simpson. . . . In one speech she said, "We say that if a woman is good enough to be a man's wife, she is good enough to take her side by him as his equal in whatever rank of life intended."

Another powerful figure in the new Attlee government will be tall, sparse hard-headed Arthur Greenwood, recently minister of postwar reconstruction. . . . Greenwood was responsible for what little slum clearance the MacDonald government undertook. . . . A member of Churchill's cabinet, Greenwood never was known as a radical or a great liberal, is a seasoned bureaucrat, knows his way around government, is an able talker.

¶ Nelson Rockefeller recently asked for an appointment with Cordell Hull, but Hull refused to see him. Hull is a bitter-ender regarding Argentina, and it was Rockefeller who largely paved the way for Argentine recognition.

Looking Back—and Ahead

By COMDR. JACK DEMPSEY

As I take over WW's chair, I find myself at a disadvantage. I have seen so little of Broadway in the last couple of years that I really don't know the score. My absence from the old street is only temporary. Like every sailor, I am looking forward to wearing a wide-brimmed Panama again, complete with a loud sports jacket and the brightest necktie I can find. That should be a matter of no more than eight months, for the Nips are hanging on the ropes and the bell isn't going to save them.

In the meantime I am in the Coast Guard for the duration, or as long as Uncle Sam has a job I can do. By the time this reaches you I expect to be somewhere in the Pacific. My assignment is that of military morale officer for the 11th, 12th, 13th and 14th Naval districts. Included in this group is Pearl Harbor and my duties may take me farther westward as our fleet hammers at the very doors of Hirohito's hovel.

Wants to Hold the White Horse

If I can only have the privilege of holding the Mikado's white horse when Admiral Halsey mounts him for his victorious ride through downtown Tokyo it will be a bigger thrill than I experienced when Jess Willard failed to answer the bell for the 4th round on that sunbaked day in Toledo, 25 years ago.

Speaking from experience I can assure you that a morale officer hasn't a tough assignment. Not with the Navy and the Coast Guard. I have trained thousands of seamen and I went ashore on Okinawa during that bloody campaign for the sole purpose of observing what benefits, if any, the men had received from our training program. There isn't a sailor out there who doesn't dream of coming home, but none of them want to return until the shooting stops. If you could talk with them at their battle stations you would be proud of just being with them.

As for myself, the war has been a wonderful, though hardly a pleasant, experience. It has been amusing, too. I was in England the day Jack London won the British Empire heavyweight championship from Tommy Mills. A British reporter asked me what I thought of Jack London and I replied that I had enjoyed reading his books and that I thought he was one of the truly great American writers.

"I am so sorry," replied the startled and polite Englishman. "I was referring to Jack London, the British prize fighter, and not Jack London, the American author."

I had to confess that I had never seen London fight and had no opinion to offer on the subject. I have since met London, a bald-headed veteran of 32 years. His defeat by Bruce Woodcock recently came as no surprise to me, as I judged from London's appearance that he was well past his prime.

A NEW FIGHTER

You may have gathered by now that I am still interested in the fight game. I am, and I expect to be active in it during the years that will be left to me after the war. Recently there arrived from the Argentine Abel Cestac, a young South American giant, sent to me by my old friend and foe, Luis Angel Firpo. If you know Firpo you will realize that he didn't lay out the money for his passage unless he was convinced Abel can fight.

Cestac hasn't been thoroughly tested yet, but I'm willing to take a chance. He's big, strong and rough.

Of course I can't be active in handling the South American. While I am in uniform, Max Waxman is looking after him. Waxman has managed several champions and he has been my personal manager for a great many years. I am fortunate to be associated in a business way with Max and also with Job Amron and Louis Brooks.

Because of them I have not had to make the financial sacrifice so many others had to make when they entered the armed forces. I couldn't have conducted my Broadway restaurant nor the Great Northern hotel any better than they have. We're a going concern and we are looking forward to the postwar years together.

BOXING WAS GOOD TO ME

Looking back from the exalted age of 50 years, I can truthfully say that boxing has been good to me. In the years just ahead I believe it will offer even greater opportunities to some Jack Dempsey of the future. Naturally I am convinced that the next heavyweight champion will come from the ranks of our fighting men. It was so after World War I and if I am not mistaken his name was Gene Tunney, a marine. I seem to recall meeting him on a rainy night in Philadelphia.

Tire conservation is important on the fighting fronts, too. Winning slogan in a contest conducted by Stars and Stripes, Army newspaper, was "Bring victory, end the fight, conserve tires day and night."

A new highly maneuverable combat vehicle called the "Staghound" uses tires four feet high. Rubber required for one such tire is equivalent to five passenger tires.

of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Thunderhead

MARY O'HARA
W.N.U. FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: Thunderhead is the only white horse ever foaled on the Goose Bar ranch in Wyoming. He resembles his great grand sire, a wild stallion called the Albino. Ken McLaughlin, 13 years old, owns Thunderhead. He hopes his horse will develop into a racer, as he is very fast. Unfortunately, he is difficult to handle, so plans for entering him in the fall race meet are uncertain. Rob McLaughlin, Ken's father, goes east with 48 horses to an important auction in Pennsylvania. This clears out most of his stock. Mrs. Nell McLaughlin, left alone on the ranch, feels depressed. Financial worries have worn her down. Then one day she returns from a ride to find Rob back, and a party in progress.

CHAPTER XIX

"I've already started!" said Nell, on her mettle now. "I've written Aunt Julia, in Boston. She has a huge circle of friends and acquaintances. And two of my school friends, Adelaide Kinney and Evelyn Sharp."

"You expect them to promote your business for you?"

"Not that way! Oh, Rob! You're being simply horrible!" Nell sprang to her feet and stood by the mantle. "I simply want to get the idea," said Rob icily. "You wanted to tell it to me, didn't you? Go on—tell the rest. I'm particularly anxious to know, now that I realize you have passed on the fact of my failure to your relatives and friends in the east."

Nell was silent for a while, then drew a long breath and said, "They won't have to promote my business. They'll be glad to give me lists of the right people to write to. And they'll let me use their names as reference. And I've made out a letter, setting out the plan, descriptions of this place and everything, and we'd have to have pictures, and all that can be mimeographed and sent to these lists of people. And we have the complete set-up. Practically no investment needed. Some guest cabins, yes—Gus and Tim and you could build them yourselves. And this is a lovely place, and there's beautiful country to ride in and plenty of horses! And I'm an awfully good cook!"

Nell said nothing more. In a moment Rob asked, "You say you've made out the letter?"

"Yes," Nell picked it up from the table and handed it to him. But Rob put out a protesting hand. "No, I don't want to see it, thank you. And I hope you haven't set your heart on this. Have you?"

"Set my heart on it?" said Nell. "Because I don't like to deny you any of your wishes."

"I know," said Nell hesitatingly. "You're awfully nice about that. I wanted to thank you for—for the sleigh Gus is making—and the monkey tree. I do thank you ever so much."

Rob brushed this aside. "It's nothing at all," he said indifferently. "No reason you should not have what you want."

Nell was silent. After a while she said, "Rob, you know this isn't just something I want—for the fun of it."

"Isn't it? I thought maybe you were lonesome here with me alone." "You know it isn't that at all. Rob, you aren't even pretending to tell the truth about anything."

"Just a damned liar, am I?"

That struck Nell as funny and helped her recover her poise. "It's because I told you that thing last summer—that the horses would never succeed and it made you mad at me. And you've never got over being mad. And I was thinking afterward that it was awful of me, to have knocked everything so—the horses and your work—without having something else to suggest. So I tried to find another plan. That's all."

Rob began to knock the ashes out of his pipe. "I hadn't meant to tell you this, Nell, but I'll have to now. Otherwise you won't be able to understand why I say no to your proposition. I am not going to continue to raise horses as the main production line of the ranch. They can be a side line. I'm going to raise sheep."

"Sheep!" exclaimed Nell. "But that requires an enormous investment! How could we possibly raise the money for that?"

"It's already raised. To begin with, although I did not make the twenty thousand dollars from my polo ponies which I might have made with good luck, I did make nearly ten. That cleans me out of horses. With the exception of the young stuff coming up I'll have nothing more to sell. But I have put every dollar of that, and more too—all I could borrow—into a band of ewes. I investigated the sheep market thoroughly when I was in Laramie. I was lucky in my buy I think. I found these up at the Doughty ranch, near the Red Desert. Fifteen hundred Corriedale ewes."

"When are they coming on the ranch?" asked Nell.

"They're already on," said Rob. "I've got a Mexican as a herder, and we drove them up from Laramie two days ago. We came in the back way."

"But what about Bellamy's sheep? They're out on the back range there. I saw them yesterday."

"If you saw sheep on this ranch yesterday, you saw our own sheep. Bellamy left with his sheep weeks ago."

Nell was about to ask "What about the lease you gave Bellamy for another year?" but thought better of it. She did say, "You just said you hadn't intended telling me this yet. Why not?"

"Because it may fail," said Rob coldly. "It's a gamble, like all stock-raising. It looks good now. The markets have been good for several years. With these sheep I ought to net almost ten thousand in one year. That will make a sizable dent in our debts. And if it continues, in a few years we'll be out from under."

For Nell, the reversal of all she had been thinking and believing and planning was so sudden, she felt flattened out. Why! then everything's all right! Everything's settled and arranged! Our future provided for—and everything!

Presently she found breath to say it aloud, and Rob acquiesced.

"Yes, everything's arranged."

"And there's nothing to worry about."

"Nothing."

The words faded into the heavy silence. Nell's eyes flickered to Rob. Everything all right—nothing to worry about—and yet, between them, this cold distance and strangeness. What made it? Was it impossible—once the habits of love had been broken—to mend them again? Even when the cause of the breach had been corrected?

Rob stared at the fire and said slowly, "I would have liked it—if

"Is this card phony or what?"

this experiment could have been worked out first, so that, when I told you, I could have told you of a 'fait accompli'—money in the bank, debts paid, notes met, a going concern—not just, as it is now, one more hope, one more plan, one more good chunk of wishful thinking."

Nell was leaning back in her armchair and made no answer.

"But," continued Rob, "since you have made it so plain that it was not only the horses you doubted, it was me too—and any ability I might have to care for you and provide a home for you—" he left the sentence unfinished.

The clock struck eleven, and Pauly rose from where she had been lying near the fire and staged an elaborate stretch, then ran meowing to Nell.

Nell lifted her automatically. "That's true, isn't it, Nell?" asked Rob in a sudden direct manner.

"What?"

"That you have lost confidence in me?"

Nell did not answer immediately. Finally she said, "Rob—I didn't think you would succeed with the horses. I told you that. But that's not you personally—"

"But it was, me, personally," he insisted. "You didn't think I was going to pull us through, did you?"

"You never took me into your confidence," said Nell. "You didn't tell me you were going to try a different line. You kept saying it was to be the horses or nothing."

"I suppose that's as good a way of answering as any," said Rob slowly.

A sudden passionate protest flung Nell to her feet. Pauly hit the floor with a little grunt. "I don't see why confidence means so much to you! I've never stopped loving you—not the least bit. Suppose some of the confidence—was gone? That would be only human—wouldn't really matter between us!"

Rob got to his feet and went about blowing the lamps out, and finally answered, "Just that it—sort of—takes the heart out of a man."

It was still possible, thought Nell, as she walked slowly upstairs. When people loved each other as they had, nothing more would be needed than just one look—one word—her name, Nell. There would be no forgiving or explaining, just a sudden coming together and all the discord flung behind them.

But Rob stood in a sort of daze in the center of the bedroom, as if he did not feel at home there. One hand held his pipe as he puffed at it, and he stood watching her as she moved about, turning the bed down, closing the window, taking her nightclothes from the closet and dropping them on the bed.

She went to his chiffonier and took out a set of pajamas and handed them to him. "Here are some fresh pajamas for you."

He took them absent-mindedly. Then, as Nell undid the belt of her skirt and stepped out of it, and peeled off her sweater, he said to her hesitatingly, "I'm awfully tired. I think I'll sleep in the other room. Do you mind?"

He looked at his wife. With just her slip on, she was seated in the low chair, one ankle crossed over the other knee to untie her shoe, her slender and beautiful legs shining in their long silk stockings. Her tawny hair hung loose over the pearl-like skin on her breasts. Her cheeks were exquisitely flushed.

Without raising her head her dark blue eyes slid up underneath her brows and she answered easily, "Not at all. I think it would be a very good idea. I shall probably sleep better myself."

Charley Sargent never missed the three weeks' autumn race meet at Saginaw Falls in Idaho, one of the few major or "recognized" tracks in the Rocky Mountain states; and had the same stables for his horses, and hotel accommodations for himself, year after year. Taking his horses down the Continental Divide from a high altitude to one several thousand feet lower gave them an advantage, and he liked the town which lay in the long valley between the Wauchichi and Shinumo ranges and had a season of pleasant autumn weather.

Although the distance from Sargent's ranch to Saginaw Falls was not more than eight hundred miles, he always shipped his horses by rail in charge of his trainer, Perry Gunston, rather than vanning them or taking them in an automobile trailer. This was because the highway made a rather precipitous descent, winding down through several mountain passes; and on the Divide, the unpredictable storms sometimes made the road dangerous or even impassable for trucks. But he himself made the trip by motor.

There were always several events scheduled for two-year-olds, in which Sargent tried out his promising youngsters, and one race, on the last day of the meet, with a ten-thousand-dollar purse, which attracted an impressive entry. It was in this race that Thunderhead was to make his debut, and long before school closed Ken had familiarized himself with the past performances of all winners of this big event. Thunderhead had only to run the two miles on the Saginaw Falls track as fast as he had run it at home to win.

For Ken to hang around his father while the letter containing his report card was being opened, or even to allow the depressing event to catch him in the same room, was so unusual that Rob McLaughlin felt sure something was fishy.

He glanced up at Ken who stood waiting beside his desk with hands driven deep into the pockets of his bluejeans. "Going to take your medicine and get it over with, are you?" he grinned, then looked at the boy's face again. That wasn't Ken's usual report-card face—the face of one waiting for a death sentence. On the contrary, the sensitive face was now flushed with anticipation, gleams of light played in the depths of his blue eyes and one smile after the other rippled across his lips.

"Read it, dad. Read it quick!" he exclaimed, and watched closely as his father took the card and studied it, item by item.

Rob simply didn't believe it. He shook his head with bewilderment. "Is this card phony or what? Do you know what's in it, Ken?"

"What?" demanded Ken confidently.

"Ninety-two in Algebra. Ninety-four in Latin. Ninety-seven in Chemistry, and one hundred in English."

Rob pointed at the card. "How'd you get this? Was it just one composition?"

"You had to be excellent all year, and write a perfect composition to end up with."

"What subject did you choose?"

"I wrote about that time I tried to get the eagle feather—you know—down there in the Valley of the Eagles, and the eagle chased me all the way down the cliff and stuck his claws in my belly and it was only my belt that saved me—but of course I fixed it up a little."

"How'd you fix it up? Seems to me that was hot stuff without any fixing."

Ken waved his hands in a suave and explanatory fashion. "Oh, I put in some romantic dope—you know, the sort of things writers write—I had it that I had a picture of my girl in the buckle of my belt, so she—sort of saved my life, you see."

JACOB REALIZES THE PRESENCE OF GOD

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 28:10-22.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon Him, to all that call upon Him in truth.—Psalm 145:18.

Crises bring out the real qualities of man. When they lead him into the very presence of God, they become an experience, the remembrance of which can bring blessing all through life.

Jacob had such an experience in our lesson, and it is the more remarkable because he was a man whose life was far from commendable. His mother, Rebekah, had determined that Jacob was to have Isaac's blessing, even though she had to use falsehood to get it.

Jacob shared the deception planned by his mother, and thereby he received the blessing of Esau. Not willing to wait God's time for the carrying out of His purpose, they sinned to gain an advantage. Then to escape the wrath of Esau, he had to flee.

I. A Revelation of God's Grace (vv. 10-15).

The fugitive was overtaken by darkness on the second night of his journey, and made his bed in the open. Then came the magnificent vision of the ladder to heaven.

Heaven and earth are not separated. There is a way to reach the throne of God, and there is a way for God to reach and bless His people. The vision of the ladder reassured Jacob.

God renewed to Jacob the covenant with Abraham and with Isaac. He does not forget. Men make treaties only to break them. God says, "I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken" (v. 15).

In His matchless grace God relieved Jacob's fear by assuring him of His protection; his loneliness by His divine presence; and his uncertainty regarding the future by the promise of blessing.

Jacob's heart was deeply moved by his dream, and as he awoke to full consciousness, he came to II. A Realization of God's Greatness (vv. 16-19).

Full of holy fear and awe, Jacob realized the presence of the infinite God. It is a proper and wholesome reaction when a man, realizing himself to be in God's presence, is overcome by the awe-inspiring experience.

Theologians, preachers and teachers have dared to speak swelling words of disrespect concerning His miraculous power, have denied the deity of His Son, and have questioned the authority of His Word. Having sown the wind of unbelief, they have reaped from the people the whirlwind of irreverence, a belittling of God, and a rejection of His authority (Hos. 8:7).

Jacob was reminded of God's immediate presence, "the Lord is in this place." The place of his vision of heavenly things had special meaning to Jacob.

The thing that Jacob "found out that night was not that God visits man, but that God is with man wherever he is. We expect to meet Him in the sanctuary, but He is near us in the market place. Not alone in the sanctuary, but where the multitude gathers in defiance of His law, He is there" (G. Campbell Morgan).

This rich experience led Jacob to III. A Recognition of God's Goodness (vv. 20-22).

The God who would supply his every need, who would watch over him and keep him, was recognized by Jacob as being worthy of his devotion, and he made a vow that He should be his God (v. 21).

The grace and goodness of God are intended to bring men to faith in Him and devotion to His service. Yet men can go on year after year, the beneficiaries of all His bounty, and never so much as say, "Thank you," let alone recognize Him as Lord.

Jacob made a very practical and workable decision to demonstrate the reality of his vow. He promised that one-tenth of all God gave him should be returned to Him.

Many have followed his example and found blessing in giving a tithe for the Lord's work. Some who count themselves far better than poor, weak and tricky Jacob have done far less to show their appreciation of God's blessing.

Note also that Jacob raised a stone of remembrance, and gave the place a name which forever after would recall not only to him, but to posterity, the wonderful blessing of that night. It is a great thing to keep fresh the memory of the occasions when we have met God in special blessing.

Trickery and deception were changed to truthfulness and devotion when Jacob met God face to face. The same blessed transformation awaits those who meet our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ in faith. Have you met Him?
